HOME & FUTURE BUSINESS PLAN

- Needs Led Commissioning – Intergrated Commissioning
- Fostering – Implementing E2E
- Workforce Development
- Data Insight and Sufficiency Strategy
- Participation & Engagement
- Securing Additional Resources

Cohort of young people

- Children and young people we care for
- Children and young people on the edge of care
- Children and young people who have “complex needs”

WE SAY “COMPLEX LIVES”

Young People hear “My needs are ‘too much’” “I am the problem”

This narrative:

- Locates the difficulty in the young person rather than the system
- Influences the way staff view young people
- Can become a self-fulfilling script

Work to date

- System wide workshops
- Individual meetings with commissioners and system partners
- Site visits to models of good practice
- Understanding of current pilots and opportunities
- Information sharing across the system
- MoU with ICBs and their Provider Collaboratives
- Integrated Governance
- Bid opportunities

Why change is needed

A fragmented system can delay support, increase pressure and limit the ability to match children and young people to the right help.

Fragmented pathways

Multiple referral, funding, quality and commissioning arrangements create duplication and variation.

Support comes too late

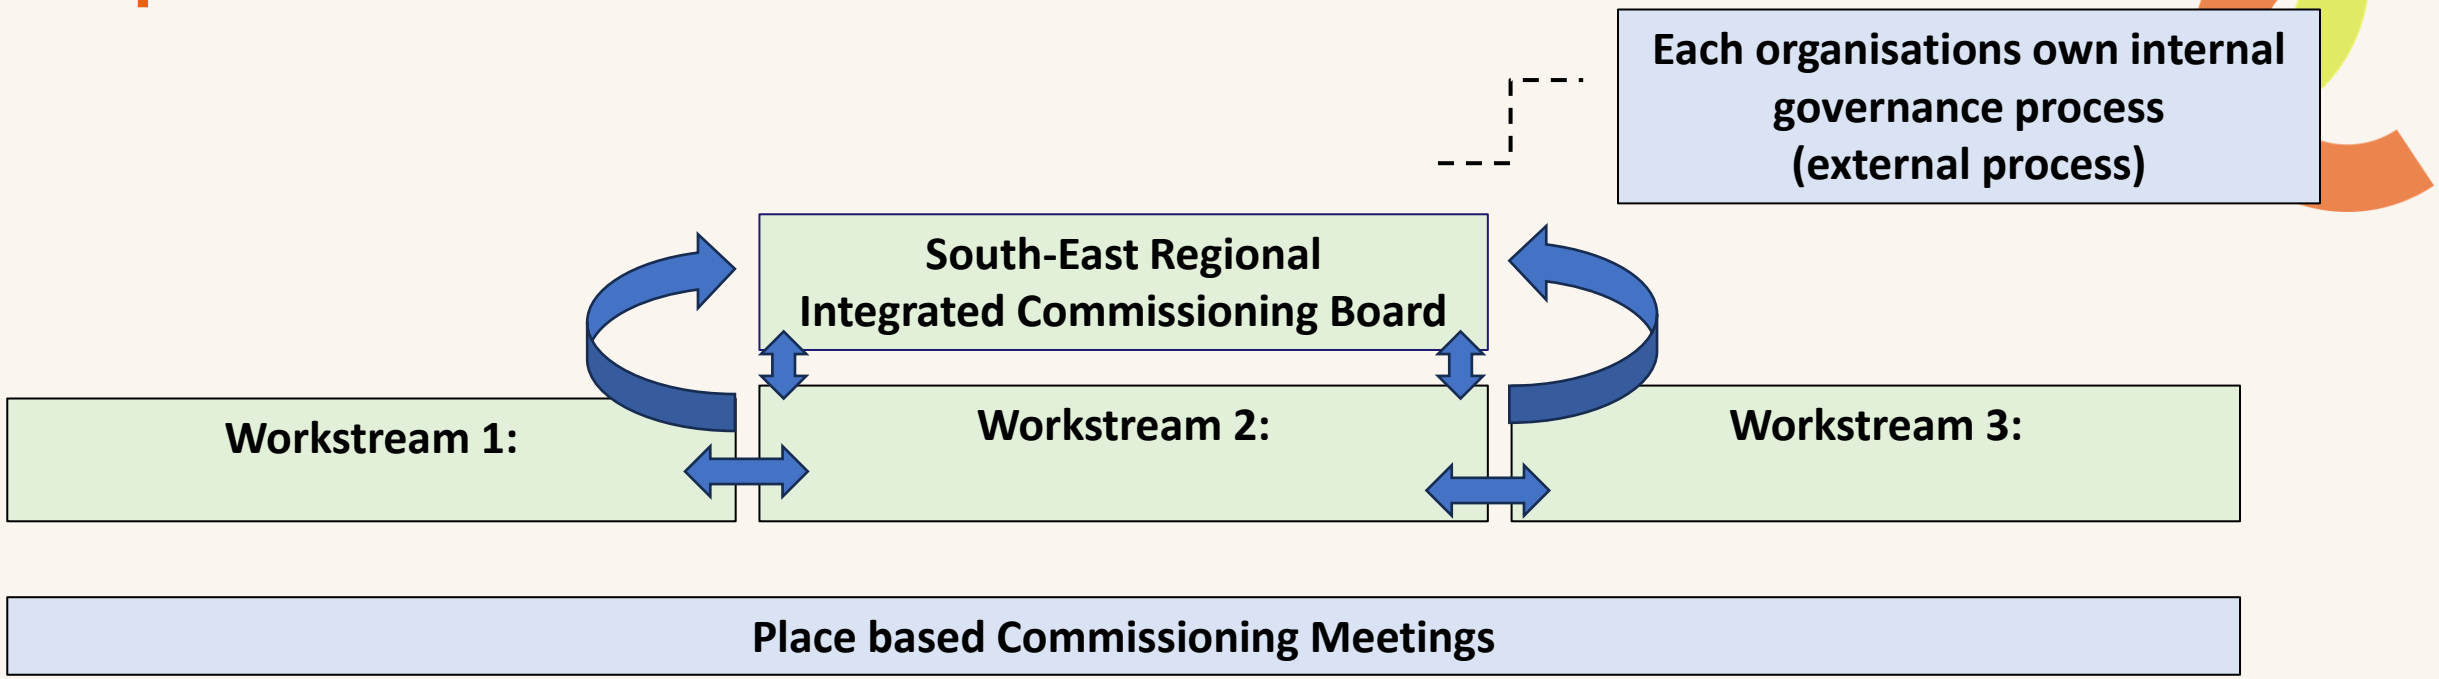

Preventative and step-down support is inconsistent, allowing needs to escalate.

Sufficiency and matching pressures

Limited visibility and coordination can contribute to unsuitable, high-cost or out-of-area placements.

Strategic opportunity: move from fragmented responses to a coordinated regional approach focused on earlier help, integrated pathways and consistent practice.

Proposed Governance

Next steps

- Integrated Commissioning Board
- Agree workstreams and membership
- Set delivery meetings and program plan
